Ohio's law mandating an abstinence-focus in school sexuality education (ORC 3313.6011) is extremely beneficial to children and families and it's important that schools follow this law. But how closely do schools stick to the law and its provisions?

For the second year, the Ohio Department of Education (now Education and Workforce) conducted an audit about compliance. ODEW finds that 607 schools are compliant, 2 non-compliant, and 2 exempt.

We disagree.

The standards of the law are clear and it's also clear that many schools are shortchanging students by normalizing high-risk sexual behavior.

We call on the ODEW to monitor and evaluate Ohio schools on their actual compliance with the law going forward. A much more thorough evaluation needs to happen.

We did our own analysis....
