How SEL Brings Radical Sex Ed to Your School

Linda Harvey & Marsha Metzger

Parents today are starting to understand that sex education is not what it used to be.

Explicit, X-rated lessons promoting reckless, hook-up relationships are being delivered to students as early as middle school through "comprehensive sex education (CSE)." To their horror, parents are discovering that some schools launch such programs and still maintain that these are abstinence-focused when the actual goal of CSE's abortion-friendly lessons is to lead children into a comfortable view of risky sexual conduct and even gender confusion.

"It's not a big deal. I can manage this as long as I have condoms or contraceptives for protection," is the CSE takeaway for most students. "And besides, I've learned that it's my right to know all this and make my own decisions." At age 11 or 12....

Wait—where did that idea come from? The "sexual rights" of your pre-teen? Social emotional learning—SEL—is where this idea is planted and takes root. And the symbiotic links between SEL and CSE and the rotten fruits that result are just beginning to be uncovered by enterprising researchers.... Video: Linda Harvey Explains How SEL Brings Obscene Sex Ed into Your School

What is this new school framework called "social emotional learning"? Is it a lovely and worthwhile endeavor- or DEI, far-left progressive agendas and amateur psychology on steroids?

And what are the chances that because of the goals of SEL, your child will be drawn into the new brand of sex ed that equates anal sex with "safety" and normalizes teen hook-ups and abortion?

Watch Linda Harvey, president of Mission America, explain the connection between SEL and CSE ("comprehensive" sex education-- the obscene Planned Parenthood version).
